President's Message

Welcome to our July issue, which I'm sure you've noticed is a bit overdue. Our conscientious editor Paul Kluth got laid up in the hospital for a few days (nothing terribly serious but required urgent attention!) and is now discharged into a rehab center. We wish him continued recovery. Modern medicine is miraculous when it works, and I'm pleased to report that Paul is doing much better. Enjoy this issue, and we hope to be back on our regular schedule next month. ...Len Augsburg

Now Available!

A Register of Liberty Seated Half Dollar Varieties Volume VI, Philadelphia Mint, 1856-1873 NA by Bill Bugert

With 561 pages and over 1,300 photographs, Volume VI describes all known die marriages (217) for Philadelphia Mint Liberty Seated half dollars from 1856 to 1873 No Arrows inclusive. Included are oversized key diagnostic images, oversized full obverse and reverse images of a late die state example of that die marriage, enhanced die crack diagrams, rarity ratings, important discussion facts, and other related information that will allow you to quickly and easily attribute your half dollars.

This Volume is in the same format as the previous volumes but with some key improvements such as improved images and summary reverse die crack diagrams for most dates. As with previous volumes, Randy Wiley's consultations are included and many of his reference collection half dollars are plated.

Free downloadable pdf copies of Volumes I thru VI, including this new Volume for your tablet or laptop/desktop. See www.lscweb.org/BillBugertBooks.php.

Hard copies of this Volume will not be available.

Regional News

New Regional Team Members Score

Dennis Fortier, LSCC Vice President, will host a Club table at the Greater Cincinnati Numismatic Exposition Coin Show July 15-16. This is another new show for the Club as the Regional Team tries to expand its reach into the central regional area of the country. Dennis will give a presentation on "Overrated and Underrated Liberty Seated Coinage" at the show.

The Bay State Coin show will be held July 29-30. Joe Casazza, Northeast Regional Director and John Frost, Education Director will host a Club table at this fine New England regional show that has long been a staple in the Regional Program line up. Many thanks to show promoter Ed Aleo for his steadfast support of the LSCC Regional Program.

Len Augsburg, LSCC President, held a regional Club meeting at summer Baltimore. Len gave a presentation on the recently held Boone Family Half Dollar auction. Here's Len's report:

"The June edition of the Baltimore show is normally the slowest of the three Whitman shows, with the back hall closed and perhaps about 2/3rds the number of dealers on hand as compared to the fall and spring shows. The LSCC met at the usual time of 9am Friday morning with about a dozen in attendance. Len spoke on the recent sale of the Pioneer Boone (James Bailey) collection of Liberty Seated halves, numbering about 300 coins and including a good number of varieties. The purchaser of the 1873 NA Open 3 half was in attendance at the LSCC meeting, and I later corresponded with the winner of the key date 1878-S piece. In terms of varieties, the most interesting coin in the sale was the 1842 Small Date Small Letters, a recently (c. 1990s) discovered variety of which additional examples are waiting to be found. We'll be back at the fall show (this year held in late October) and expect attendance to be back to the usual level."

John Lundsten (LSCC Treasurer) and Jerry Sajbel hosted a Club table at the Raleigh NC Money Expo June 17-18. They signed up two new members and kept current Club members in touch with the LSCC.

John displayed a very significant collection of Liberty Seated coinage and garnered many accolades. Jerry displayed his AU Barber half dollars. Both of these new Regional Team members report having a great time promoting the LSCC.

The Curious Collector

by Len Augsburger, LSCC #1271

The Next Wave

Today's collectors might be surprised to learn that early editions of the Guide Book did not contain mintage figures. Published with a cover date of 1947 (publishers always push out the cover date, sort of like new car dealers releasing 2023 models during the prior summer), the Guide Book publication actually predated a systematic compilation of the mintage figures from primary sources. The New York publisher Wayte Raymond dispatched Walter Breen to the National Archives in the early 1950s, and eventually the mintage figures became ubiquitous in pricing guides.

As a result, relative pricing in the early Guide Books is all over the place. An 1873-CC No Arrows quarter, of which five examples are known today, comes in at $175 in the 1947 edition, while the 1873-CC With Arrows (current population, perhaps a hundred pieces) is priced closely behind at $150. The 1870-CC trails at $50. I'm sure any collector today would be happy to trade an 1873-CC With Arrows quarter for three 1870-CC coins of the same grade.

Market pricing auto-corrected as mintage information became widely dispersed. But the mintage figures alone did not tell the whole story. Actual populations could be impacted by melting, circulation, and contemporary collecting. These are all post-striking factors, and the original mintage figures cannot predict any of this. Thus, while the number of pieces struck is a good starting point for valuation, there is much more to consider.

The advent of third-party grading services in the mid-1980s brought the next wave of data to the market. Now collectors could refine their ideas of which dates were truly rare and which were not. While the data could be somewhat manipulated by collector's and dealer's submission patterns, the PCGS and NGC census reports somewhat leveled the playing field as everyone was now working from the same data.

As the census data accreted over time, a new factor came into play – condition rarity. Collectors and dealers already knew coins like 1860-S quarters were scarce, but only the sharpest were aware that they were even more challenging in the AU/MS range. Gene Gardner (and the underbidders) pushed these coins up to record levels, driven by their true condition rarity and the desire to own the “finest known,” or least close to “finest known.”

What is the next wave? Enter CAC. Now in business for 15 years, CAC approval is playing more and more of a factor in the market. The idea is “originality rarity.” That's an awkward term, and the first marketer who can come up with a more adroit way of conveying the concept should do well.

In the meantime, we're going to hear a lot about coins with low CAC populations of perhaps 10 to 20 pieces, which occurs quite often within the Liberty Seated series.

Collectors seem to have an inbred need to distinguish their coins from those of their fellow collectors. Mintage figures, third-party encapsulation, census reports, and now the "green beans" all cater to this innate desire. Where do we go from here? I'm not sure, except to say that the CAC effect has legs and will be here for the foreseeable future.

I believe there is still room for computer grading, as anything that can reduce a coin to a number seems to be rather popular among collectors. It's entirely possible that a human-like AI will lead us toward a technical measure of eye appeal that becomes widely accepted. If the grading services aren't working on this, they may get left behind. Regardless, it will be fun to watch the market continue to evolve.
